Dear Microsoft Settlement:

I write to encourage the Justice Department to pursue the suit against Microsoft and its monopoly power in the computer market. Microsoft's offer of used equipment is an insult to the American public. How about having Microsoft supply new compatible equipment and training in its use to all schools who do not already have computer equipment/labs or cannot afford them? In light of the Enron debacle and their political contributions, I should think Microsoft with its contributions would want to tread softly and dispel any sense of impropriety.

Please see to it that justice, not political expediency, is served.

Sincerely,

Carol A. Scholp
